San Francisco Maritime National Historical Park is home to over 100 historically significant vessels and a world-class collection of Pacific maritime artifacts and documents. Over 4 million visitors enjoy a number of the park's ships and exhibits at Hyde Street Pier annually.

Good visitor orientation often begins with being sure that the visitor can get their bearings. This project will produce a cast iron and bronze compass rose that will be installed in a very high traffic area of the park, where it will be inset into the deck of the Hyde Street Pier. The 32-inch disc will indicate the four prime points of the compass all set around the National Park Service logo. The Fund for People in Parks is providing a grant for design, manufacture, and installation of the compass rose.

The compass rose and inlay plaque have been fabricated and are currently being adjusted for installation in March 2019.
